

19 Other household income

This module asks about income other than that recorded elsewhere in the survey. For each category of income listed in Table 1, an enumerator will ask for amount of total income received by household since the last interview, distinguishing between monetary and in-kind income. In case of monetary income, an enumerator will ask further about payment channels. Since this module focuses on income not included in other parts of survey, enumerators should make sure the following types of income are not included in this module to avoid double counting.

- 1) Compensation for work (already included in module 3)
- 2) Business income (already included in module 10)
- 3) Income from renting real estate (already included in module 12)
- 4) Income from selling assets listed in module 13
- 5) Interest from lending (already included in module 15)
- 6) Interest from bank accounts (already included in module 16)
- 7) Income from interest-bearing financial assets and from selling financial assets (already included in module 17)
- 8) Gifts, inheritances, or assistance received from individuals outside the household (already included in module 18).

However, gifts or assistance from government or private organizations should be included in this module.

If a respondent mentions that the household received income from these sources, enumerators should make sure the relevant information is recorded in corresponding modules

- 1) Ask respondent if any household members received each category of income, as listed in Table 1, since the last interview. Please look at the example below to learn how to complete the table.

Example

A household received a 1,500 baht wire transfer for elderly allowance and received flood-relief necessities worth 3,000 baht and 1,500 baht of cash and check combined. In addition, the household received a combined tax return and free scholarship in the form of a 5,000-baht check, but cannot distinguish the amount among the two. A child in household received free lunch, but the respondent does not know the total value. The household also received a lottery payoff but refused to tell the amount. Finally, the household head received 10,000 baht commission for helping his friend sell land but did not want to specify the channel through which the income was received.
